To Whom It May Concern:

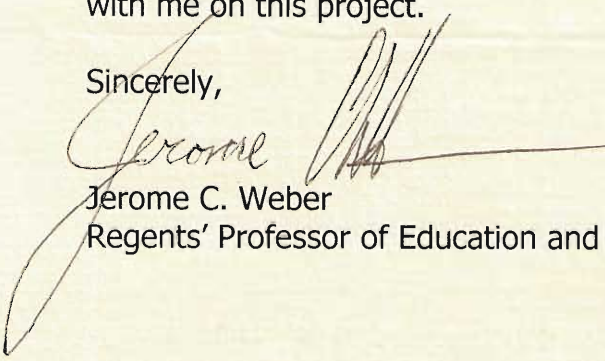

I am writing this letter in support of Ms. Susan Houck who is seeking freelance work in the area of desktop publishing.

During the 1997 calendar year a colleague and I were editors of a book entitled Issues in Higher Education: Enduring Enigmas in American Colleges and Universities which was used as text material for graduate-level courses in higher education administration. At that time Ms. Houck was employed at The University of Oklahoma in Document Production Services which, at the time, was known as the Information Processing Center.

Most of my scholarly publications have been articles published in professional journals and are easily edited and produced. However, as you would imagine, the publication of a book requires a different scale of work and my colleague and I were grateful for the help of Ms Houck in the effort required to bring this project to publication. Her work was done expertly and in a timely fashion. In addition, we found working with Ms. Houck to be personally pleasant and regarded her as a colleague who was interested in the best possible outcome for our project.

I would recommend her highly and hope that you find her qualifications merit your serious consideration in regard to her potential as a person who can add value to your enterprise. I would be happy to address any additional questions you may have regarding Ms. Houck's work with me on this project.

Sincerely,

Jerome C. Weber
